Airway Ultrasound and Imaging The AMF Approach (A-USGI)

4th September 2026
LHMC & Associated Hospitals

Refuting the traditional beliefs that ultrasound is futile in the imaging of air-filled structures, this focused advanced workshop will highlight why airway ultrasonography is fast becoming an unmatched skill in airway management in OR, ICU or ER; be it airway assessment, selection of appropriate equipment, confirmation of optimum device placement and location or supporting surgical access to airway (emergency front of neck access or PCT). The use of ultrasound can also aid in early detection of airway related complications like pneumothorax, vocal cord paresis, postoperative stridor, endobronchial intubation.

On the other hand, this workshop will reintroduce the 'old' imaging modalities like plain X-rays, MRI and CT of head, neck and chest to the participants and clarify that these too offer much more than what most of us think these do.

Highlights:

- Hands-on training for orientation to the airway sono-anatomy & imaging
- Airway assessment & selection of appropriate equipment
- Confirmation of optimum device placement & location
- Supporting surgical access to airway (emergency front of neck access or PCT)
- A radiologist-airway manager guided tour of airway X-rays, CT/MRI, 3-D reconstructions
